

Breath ... Sound ... Trance

The Society for the Anthropology of Consciousness presents its 2001 Annual Spring Conference

Wednesday April 4th through Sunday April 8th, 2001

Bastyr University, Kenmore, WA
(Seattle Area)

This year's conference theme explores the relationship between sound, breath, and consciousness. Presentations will include topics such as meditation and breath, hypnosis, and music and trance, in addition to more general SAC interests in states of consciousness and spiritual traditions. There will be a keynote performance of specially choreographed trance-inducing music and dance held in an exquisite European-style Chapel, proposed experiential workshops including Belly Dancing, Qi Gung, Cultural Conscious Movement, and Ericksonian Hypnosis, and a Vintage Fair and sensorium booth on Saturday night.

Please visit the SAC 2001 Spring Conference website for more information including affordable on-site accommodations:

The Society for the Anthropology of Consciousness (SAC) is an interdisciplinary academic organization dedicated to the study of consciousness in cultures around the world. A section of the American Anthropological Association, SAC members utilize cross-cultural, experiential, and theoretical approaches to study consciousness.

The primary areas of interests include states of consciousness; ethnographic studies of religious, shamanistic, mediumistic, mystical, and related traditions; indigenous healing practices; linguistic, philosophical, social, and symbolic studies of consciousness; anomalous phenomena and the roles these play in traditional and modern cultural practices.
